

Why Limbach

Public mechanical contractor in the eastern US. FY25 revenue guidance $650-680M, ~1,400 craft-heavy team, six verticals with healthcare and industrial leading. The pivot toward Owner Direct Relationships is what makes it interesting: ODR hit 76.6% of Q3 2025 revenue, T&M runs ~1/3 of ODR, so the annual T&M book is roughly $165-175M. That's the wedge.

REVENUE FY25E	GROSS MARGIN FY25 GUIDE	ODR · Q3'25
$650-680M	25.5-26.5% cut from 28-29%	76.6%
T&M SHARE OF ODR	T&M RUN-RATE	CRAFT
~1/3	$165-175M/yr	Union majority

Four industrial mechanical acquisitions closed in 18 months: Pioneer Power ($66.1M, Jul 2025, adds ~$120M annualized from 2026), Consolidated Mechanical (2024, KY/MI/IL, $23M), ACME Industrial Piping (2024), Industrial Air (2024). Four field-ops cultures to integrate, different craft locals.

BACKUP · MARGIN DEFENSE ANGLE

Q3 2025 guidance cut gross margin from 28-29% to 25.5-26.5%. Per-worker data is one of the few things a CFO can point at for FY26 margin defense.

What I can't see from public data

Four hours of desk research gets you what's above. What it can't get, and what would actually matter to close:

- Active T&M dispute status. Whether any current Limbach ODR contract is sitting in a billing dispute right now. Court dockets aren't indexed by contractor, and owner AR aging isn't public.
- Which UA local rep has cleared a wearable-camera MOU before. A handful of precedents exist in union mechanical. Which ones apply to Pioneer Power's Midwest footprint is a 20-minute call to a local rep, not desk research.
- A warm-intro path to Angerosa. Whether anyone on Ironsite's team, investors, or advisors has a 2nd-degree connection to him or to a Limbach regional president. That's a graph lookup from inside your own LinkedIn, not mine.
